About Libya Restart

Since 2014 UNIMED has committed its work to support Higher Education Institutions in crisis emergencies, promoting cooperation as a priority, through capacity building, mobility, exchange of ideas and sharing of knowledge. In this long journey, we learnt that Universities can play a decisive role in easing the crises, in rebuilding competencies and shaping the future of countries. This is particularly true in the case of Libya.

UNIMED has started the collaboration with Libyan HEIs since 2015 in the framework of the E+ programme through some projects of Capacity Building, while now our presence in the country is quite solid and we share a large spectrum of initiatives and activities with Libyan HEIs. In our opinion and due to our experience, Universities in Libya can really make the difference through empowerment and collaboration, being the University considered as a key player for stability by the local population. In 2018 UNIMED decided to launch the Libya Restart project, an initiative aimed at gaining a deeper understanding of the Libyan Higher Education System, through a research activity performed jointly by UNIMED staff and Libyan colleagues. We spent one year collecting and analyzing data and documentation, discussing results with Libyan colleagues and counterparts, sharing ideas, finding alternative sources and interpretations. Libya Restart is the concrete result of our work.
